

SEVEN CANYONS TRUST

SEVEN CANYONS TRUST | COMMUNITY ACTION INTERNSHIP

ABOUT

Our mission is to daylight and rehabilitate the seven canyon creeks, from City to Little Cottonwood Creeks, restoring beauty and health to the hydrology of the Salt Lake valley. Daylighting is the uncovering of lost urban waters, bringing them back to the surface and restoring their natural stream channels. By our calculations, there are over 21 miles of buried creeks throughout the valley.

POSITION

1. Community Action Internship – Assist the Seven Canyons Trust with its Seven Creeks | Walk Series. This is a program to provide walking conversations throughout the Jordan Watershed where participants get outside to share stories, insights, visions, and any other relevant information to explore ways to better manage, restore, cherish, and love the Jordan River and its seven tributaries. By combining elements of ecological restoration, art and expression, and the spoken word, this program seeks to build community support and awareness around our degraded and buried urban waters, through a series of urban interventions, facilitating the future daylighting, or uncovering, and restoration of the hydrology in the Salt Lake Valley.

Interns should be creative and interested in community activism through art and expression. Interns should be proficient in written communication, design, Adobe Photoshop, Illustrator, and InDesign, and social media skills.

DETAILS

This internship will be unpaid. Time commitments and schedule can vary. However, we expect interns to commit anywhere from 10 to 15 hours a week. Interns must be able to work from home, as the Seven Canyons Trust does not have a formal office space.
